Supreme Court Upholds DEA's Kidnapping of Mexican Doctor

BY ALLEN PUSEY

On Feb. 7, 1985, while on a short walk to meet his wife for lunch, Enrique "Kiki" Camarena Salazar disappeared from a street near the U.S. consulate in the fabled Mexican city of Guadalajara. His body was found a month later on a ranch in Michoacán. There were signs of apparent torture:

DEA later acknowledged it had bank-rolled, Álvarez was taken into custody, held overnight in a neighboring state, bundled into a small private airplane and flown to El Paso, Texas, where he was informed by federal authorities that he had been indicted for his part in Camarena's death.

Álvarez conceded to investigators conviction for larceny. Pinkerton agent hired by government to serve a extradition instead abducted him back. The extradition or no, "such a deduction is no sufficient party should not answer within the jurisdiction right to try him."

In the second case, F (1952), the court similar plea by Shirley Collins police kidnapped him in stand trial for murder in what became known as doctrine, the court declared are required to be in court trial, and it doesn't matter the authorities get them
